Next Tuesday the sixteenth annual fair of the Hardinsburg Agricultural and Mechanical Association will commence at the handsome grounds near our pleasant light shirt town, and continue during the ensuing four days.

The year is confined almost exclusively to horses, cattle, and other live stock, and we have no doubt that the liberal contributions offered, the display will be large and the entertainment excellent.

The fair is composed of some of the first and best citizens and farmers of our county, viz: W. K. Withers, John Rhodes, John Alexander, W. K. Stephens and James Crawford, which is a guarantee that the fair will be conducted on the square. The speed every day will prove very interesting, and we hope the attendance will be large and the patronage remunerative.

THE GUERRILLAS RAID.

Presently the gallanting on the outside of the door of the Post office, a stenographer issued the command: "Halt!"

"Get in!" cried, trembling Petrus to his fearful spouse, "dear day!"

"Just then a loud rattle sounded on the front door."

"Hello!" came a gruff hail.

"Who's there?" queried valiant Petrus in a hoarse whisper.

"Hello!" came the answer.

"Is this Petrus's shop?" was the response.

"Lawd, did I hit him," was the answer.

"Then open the door, and be d—d quick about it," General Morgan wanted to hear.

"Blessed cooness!" cried poor Petrus, "there isn't a shop of mine in this place."

"Then Dan Yankee homeguards with Colonel Shanks on the hill done ropped the cherting!"

"What the Yankees robbed you? Ain't you Yankee yourself?"

"Me Yankee? Not much. I'm der bestest rapped in dish town. You sakes say der neighborhood and der'll tell you der same!" cried the poor fellow.

"But you are reported to General Morgan as a postoffice Yankee, and your name is down on der black list!"

"Why, are we take all you've got and then take you to headquarters, where you'll be shot and tried and on der scaffold?"

"No!" cried Petrus, "who told you I was von tant Yankee?"

"Harney Bohler, one of der best friends der confederacy has in Cloverport. He has kept us fully posted about you for months."

"Parney Bohler? Why, got miahler soldiers, he's der worstest man in dish town. He's a Yankee in der name, but he's a German in der heart."

"I nether told nobody any der thing!"

"But his shop is across der street here?"

"Yes, shoot der other door."

"Now, if you are lying to me, I'll come back here and burn your house down, with you in it!"

With this parting threat the confederate raiders turned away, and the door was closed.

In the meantime Bill Smart, in consideration of the fact that he was a member of the part of a regiment of horse, and was down on all tours in and out of the county, he was a member of the part of a regiment of horse, and was down on all tours in and out of the county.

As soon as he was certain the dreadful rebels had left, honest Petrus turned to the door, and saw a man in a uniform, who was a member of the part of a regiment of horse, and was down on all tours in and out of the county.

"What voice?" he asked.

"Don't you see I'm down der door?"

"How I know him?"

"Don't you see I'm down der door?"

"What?"

CHAPTER VIII.

Little smiling the Expat.

"See, dearest, upon my knees I plead for your hand!" said the wife that will make me the happiest man on earth! "I will be mine!"

"Give me time to think, Adolphus. I—I am not exactly prepared to give you an answer."

"Oh! dearest Ellen; do not put me off! Have pity on me, transport me to ecstacy! say you will be mine!"

"Arise! Adolphus, dear! upon one condition I will."

"Oh! name it name it! you cannot impose a task too heavy! What is it dearest?"

"It is that you have your eyes made by J. W. Babbage, the most fashionable Merchant-Tailors, corner Third and Market Streets, Louisville, Ky."

The answer to this was drowned in a sound like the popping of the cork of a champagne bottle.

The scene here described took place at the Great Southern Exposition, Louisville, Ky., the other evening. The principals in this little dialogue no doubt thought themselves secure from observation, and from being overheard. Well; what of it? Such like scenes are quite natural; they speak well for "the lady's taste and judgment in requiring her 'Dolphy' to have his wedding outfit made by J. W. Babbage, the universal popular, and always stylish, Merchant-Tailors, corner Third and Market Streets, Louisville, Ky. This establishment is so well and favorably known, both at home and abroad, that much more need not be said about it. Yes, even the ladies know it, and speak of it, and work for it, among their gentlemen friends. It is not uncommon for ladies to visit the establishment unattended, and make a selection of material, or suit, for husband, father, or brother. They are at all times welcome. Gentlemen, however, who take pleasure in the company of their wives, or of their friends, are invited to call at the mammoth Merchant-Tailoring establishment of J. W. Babbage, corner Third and Market Streets, Louisville, Ky., for their extensive building is especially fitted for the display of piece goods—and examine the master works of art of the looms of Europe and America, for men's wear, which are fashionably and perfectly fitted for the trade, and cut in the latest style of the season in every respect; no disappointment; no delay in the delivery of goods; ever prompt; always on time, and always reasonable in price. J. W. Babbage, corner Third and Market Streets, Louisville, Ky., will furnish you with the new suit.
